We measure these accomplishments not only in terms of performances, but also by transformation.

Quality Pharmaceutical Education commands a price, which are justifiable with reciprocating with quality output in terms of Academic performance.

The effects of these harsher operating environment has already starting to be felt. Over the past decade, but the college has managed to sustain itself on its merit.

Undeterred by the present turbulence of opening of several pharmacy colleges, it continues to play emphasis on good working practices in creating healthy safe and corporate professionals, with specific initiatives taken in all these earmarked areas. To modernize harmonies and revamp teaching inputs and continue its transparent, fair, and pragmatic practices without compromising the quality.

Good Teaching Practices(GTP)

The Emergence of so many players in the field of pharmacy education both at under graduate level and PG level in the state scenario has accentuated. The SUCP continues its best teaching practices and guidelines to sustain competitiveness, which gives a cutting and significant edge in this field in the new challenging market with focus on quality teaching solutions.

With rapid change taking place across the education sector, it is therefore upgrading itself in all aspects of good teaching practices to rally and have continued presence as a prominent leader in the education sector.

Never the less it is also addressing the need to re-schedule and re-priorities strategies in consonance with market conditions and reschedule the priorities to meet the professional needs.

The key parameters of Good Teaching practices are the qualified and experienced personnel teaching the students. It is the our responsibility to clearly send a message in the set up that there is only single quality teaching and this has to be built in and nurtured as a professional culture.

While it is important to create facilities for teaching, it is equally important and essential that these facilities are used for quality teaching. The pharmacy education sector is at cross roads with several pharmacy colleges are established.
